This lovable acoustic band creates a sound as familiar as the thoughts inside your head. A unique mixture of Classic Country and lighthearted musical theater, their music is stripped down to basics and complemented with their intricate and flowing harmonies. At the core of the band is the partnership of The Lovebirds themselves, Jason W. McKinzie and Amy Celeste Young-Beard. Their chemistry is evident immediately, and their performances are a cool refreshing breeze.

The Lovebirds possess an extensive repertoire of original and cover songs, including Americana, Classic Country, Oldies, Folk and Traditional. Set lists are crafted specifically for each performance, factoring in both the venue and the audience. Scott Powers on banjo and mandolin and Sabhaois (pronounced "savage") serve to round out this classic timeless sound.

The term "Americana" is fairly loose, encompassing many aspects of art and culture. The Lovebirds are an amalgam of Americana, and share their experience of it all through the eyes of love and humor. Their chemistry is evident immediately, and their performances are a cool refreshing breeze. Whether performing their fun and quirky original compositions or seamlessly blending a wide range of classic tunes, The Lovebirds are a journey: through life; through history; through optimism; through levity.
